

Over the past few years, the Frydonics have significantly intensified their attempts to capture the Balaxian base on the planet Hagan. The crew had to remain extremely vigilant. Unfortunately, a mistake by one of the technicians led to a delayed warning about the enemy attack. The defenders had only enough time to evacuate. In haste, they dismantled the main computer and left the planet. Meanwhile, on Balaxia, a plan was developed to reclaim the base. The base data was stored in a computer that was damaged during transport, while the spare parts remained in the base now occupied by the Frydonics. Two subsequent commando missions failed; the only information retrieved was that the aggressors had abandoned the base, leaving behind numerous combat robots that made it impossible to relieve the components. The Supreme Commander of Balaxia decided to send a remotely controlled android to Hagan. Its control was entrusted to the most skilled operative:

The Frydonics have taken over the Balaxian base on the planet Hagan, forcing the defenders to evacuate and leave behind valuable data. To recover the lost computer parts, the command dispatches a remotely controlled android into the danger-filled base. Your mission is to guide the android, avoid deadly traps, and destroy enemy robots to save the operation.